To Whom it May Concern,

I am pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Ronna Glickman. I have known Ronna for over ten years and have worked with her in my capacity as Instructional Specialist at Williamsville CSD and as Director of Professional Learning of the NYS Middle School Association. In all of my dealings with Ronna, she has proven herself to be both a reliable colleague and a knowledgeable presenter.

Ronna has taught courses as part of Williamsville's professional learning program for at least ten years on critical topics ranging from social media safety and digital citizenship to fiction and non-fiction books addressing social issues and mental health and bullying prevention. Her audiences include teachers, administrators, mental health professionals, and support staff. Her classes consistently receive very positive evaluations.

Ronna has also been a key presenter at several NYSMSA middle-level conferences and institutes across the years. Here, too, she receives rave reviews, with participants providing feedback that she provides them with an abundance of useful, up-to-date resources and thoroughly explains her topics.

Ronna's current interest is studying the brain in relation to social media usage and gaming. The course that she is currently offering, Social Media Safety – Screens, Kids, and Brains, had such a waitlist that we are offering the course two additional times this spring.

In addition to her own business and website, socialmediasafety.education, Ronna was recently certified as a Screen Strong Ambassador. I recommend her to your organization without hesitation. Her work is timely, important, and well-done.

Sincerely,

Linda Ruest
